An Exceptional Award to Honor an Exceptional Researcher

The SHRM Foundation manages an endowment fund to honor exceptional researchers for their lifetime achievement in human resource research. This research fund was established to honor Mr. Michael R. Losey for his contributions to the Society for Human Resource Management and the HR field. Michael Losey served the HR profession for more than 45 years and retired as president and CEO of SHRM in 2000. Since the inception of this award, it has been presented to icons in the HR research field, many of whom continue to serve the profession through ongoing research efforts. To learn more about the award and those who have received it, visit shrm.org/loseyaward. The award is given at an annual SHRM event, and the winner will receive a check for $50,000.

How much is the award?

The annual award is $50,000 to the researcher.

What is the deadline to submit a nomination?

Submissions must be received no later than Friday, July 15, 2016. Please send your nominations by e-mail (loseyaward@shrm.org) or via hard copy to arrive by that date.

Who is eligible to be nominated?

The nature of the award is to recognize significant contributions to the HR field through empirical research and its application to practice. To be eligible, the nominee must possess a broad, deep and significant track record of contributing to the HR discipline through research. Additionally, the nominee must have interactions with the practitioner community, as evidenced, for example, by speaking or working with practitioners or by writing books, book chapters or journal articles that have affected daily HR practice. The website (shrm.org/loseyaward) also includes information about research journals known for their rigorous standards to help you assess the breadth, depth and reach of your nominee's empirical research efforts.

Where can I read about previous recipients of the award?

Profiles of the previous recipients are featured at shrm.org/loseyaward. Each profile includes information on the accomplishments of the recipient and will provide a benchmark of achievement that the selection committee considers during its deliberations.

Can I nominate more than one individual?

Yes. An individual may submit or co-sign the nomination of more than one candidate.

Are there any limitations on whom I can nominate?

This award is open to those who meet the eligibility requirements, with the exception of current SHRM and SHRM Foundation members, and members of SHRM volunteer panels. Self-nominations will not be accepted.

Although an individual cannot nominate him/herself or submit his/her own nomination package, any other individual may nominate someone who meets the eligibility criteria.

Our SHRM chapter would like to nominate someone. Is that possible?

No. An individual or a small group of individuals from the chapter—but not the entire chapter—may nominate any person who meets the eligibility requirements.

What should the nomination package include?

A complete nomination package must include a current detailed CV or resumé and a nomination letter of no more than two pages in length that includes:

- A summary of the nominee's significant past and continuing contributions related to the HR field. Include highlights of the nominee's theme or focal point of his or her research.
- A detailed narrative description of the reasons the individual is being nominated.
- A complete list of all publications and significant speaking engagements.
- A statement that highlights the nominee's interaction with and effect upon HR practitioners.

Where should I send my nomination?

Electronic submissions are strongly encouraged. Please send nominations to loseyaward@shrm.org. You can also mail a hard-copy nomination to:
